Keysa & Gaby

- The Twice Vice duo has been taught never to speak highly of themselves as it may make others think that we are conceited. However, we are going to speak about a few things that we like and enjoy doing in our everyday life. We both have a passion for not only fashion but for reading. You can always catch one of us reading, if we are not blogging or shopping. From reading a romance novel or reading a fashion article, reading helps you be open minded about life situations and hope you grow as a person. Keysa has a love for fashion, ballet, and tennis. However, Gaby has in interest in cooking, music, and travel. Keysa and Gaby believe that there is nothing better than surrounding yourself with good friends and having a good time! We both, make sure that God is always in our life.

- Keysa and Gaby have embraced many different hobbies and sports, however we have never given blogging a try! Blogging is considered an art, so we started blogging not to make a business and make money. We created Twice Vice to share what we have, to show different likes and dislikes. What is beautiful to me might not be so beautiful to someone else. Beauty is in the eye of the holder! We believe that blogging will help us become better writers and better thinkers. Sharing our love for fashion with others is definitely our favorite part!

Our Twice Vice Teens Keysa and Gaby sponsored by Chiffino, are both inspired by the latest trends and awesome shoes! They are both excited about taking on this new blog adventure, and want as many people to follow their adventure as possible! Follow them on Twitter and Instagram @TwiceVice !

Naughty or Nice?

Winter Fashion Guide

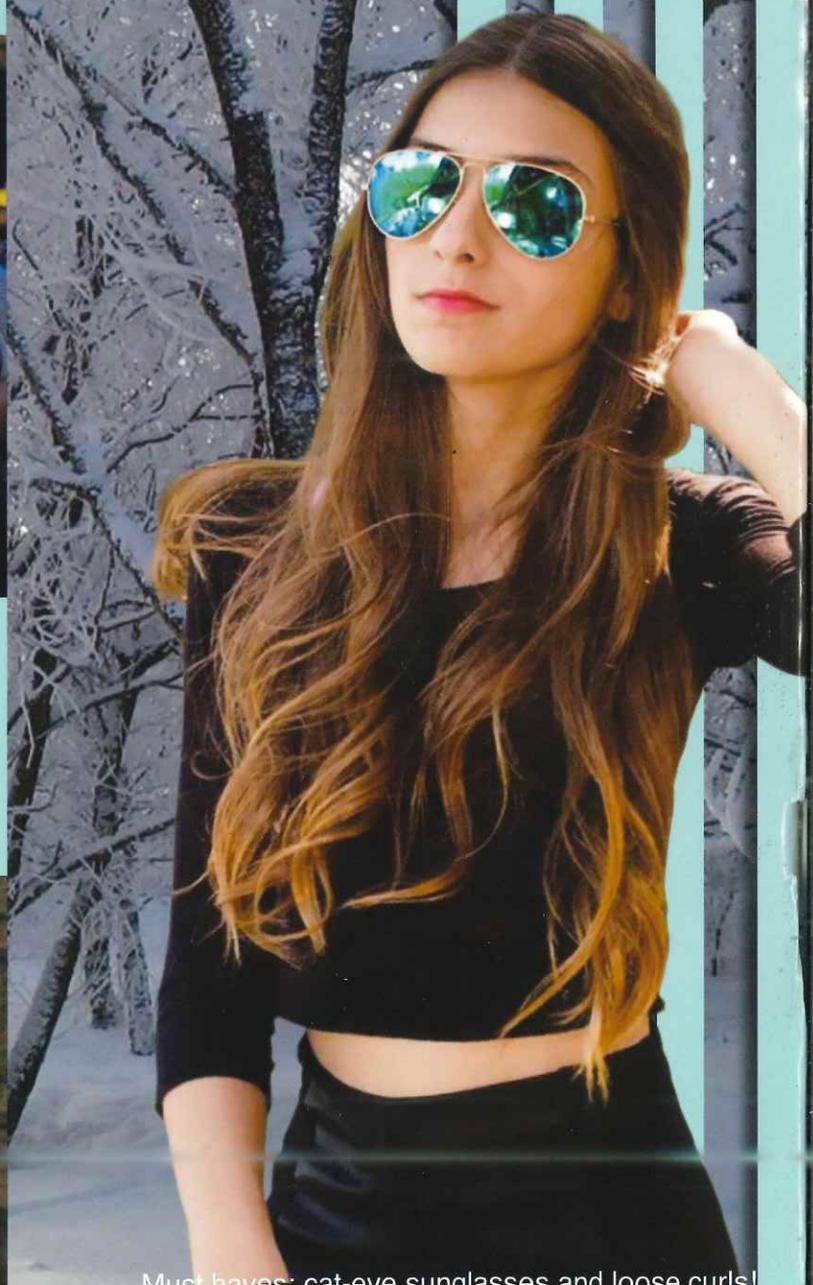

By: Julia Campos, Giuliana Gonzalez, Andrea Hernandez, Melissa Marquez

The naughty winter look is a time to change from your usual fashion and go dark. You can mix and match black and white to give you a really cool winter "bad girl" look. You can rock this look with black leather short or pants and an over the shoulder red or white top. Accessorize with fishnet tights and black boots!

The nice is best described by your typical "Santa's Sweetheart" look. Being super easy to put into action! This look can be pulled off with a red, black, or white knee length dress. Shoes… again? No problem once again! You can either rook a gorgeous pair of pumps or your casual, yet fancy ballerina flats.

Columbus Explorers' journey comes up short at Class 8A state finals

By: Andre C. Fernandez
MIAMI HERALD

Columbus quarterback Tucker Beirne throws the ball in the fourth quarter in the 2014 Class 8A Boys Football Championship at the Citrus Bowl in Orlando, Florida, December 13, 2014.

Columbus waited 32 years for another chance to win its first state football championship.

Explorers' students, parents and faculty joined graduates spanning those three-plus three decades hours before kickoff and gradually filled the Citrus Bowl parking lot with a festive tailgate atmosphere rarely seen at the state finals.

But then Apopka spoiled Columbus' party.

Propelled by their single-wing offense, Apopka amassed 268 yards, took an early 14-point lead and held off Columbus 30-23 in the Class 8A state championship game, denying the Explorers their elusive state crown.

"I've never seen an offense like that," said senior J.R. Garrigo, who had an interception. "We needed turnovers on defense, and we got that and got back into the game. We just came up a little bit short."

Columbus (13-2) finished with its highest win total in school history and its third state finals appearance (1980 and 1982).

Apopka (11-4), which made its third consecutive appearance in the state final, won its second state championship during that span and third overall.

The Explorers fell behind 14-0 after two rushing touchdowns by Deshawn Massey on Apopka's first two drives.

Three times, Columbus cut the deficit to one score.

The Explorers forced a punt and regained possession at their own 42-yard line with 5:06 remaining and trailing 30-23. Apopka didn't allow Columbus to cross the 50, and two consecutive incomplete passes on third and fourth down turned the ball over on downs. Apopka then drove to Columbus' 5-yard line before turning it back on downs, but by then Columbus had no timeouts and 49 seconds left.

Six plays later, Apopka was celebrating.

"We had come close three of the last four years, so I'm extremely proud of what we did this year," Columbus coach Chris Merritt said. "This is one of the best teams in the team sense that we've had here. That's what gave us a chance in this game."

The Explorers became one-dimensional on offense, rushing the ball only nine times for minus-11 yards. The rushing futility set a new state championship game record, surpassing the minus-10 yards Naples limited St. Augustine to in 2007.

Columbus chose to divert completely to the passing game, throwing the ball 47 times and amassing 283 yards through the air.

Senior Tucker Beirne completed 27 of those passes and threw three touchdown passes in the final game of his three-year Columbus career.

"We knew coming in that passing was going to be most important because they had a great run defense," Beirne said. "We have the ability to throw the ball that many times and be successful."

Senior wide receiver Austin Maloney, an FIU commitment, caught eight passes for 111 yards and a touchdown.

"We played our hearts out and had an amazing season," Maloney said. "Since last season was a real nightmare, but we changed all of that this season."

Beirne's 11-yard touchdown pass to junior Jerron Rollins and a 33-yard field goal by Joey Tolgyesi cut Apopka's lead to 14-9 at halftime.

But Apopka opened the second half by putting together a 12-play, 62-yard touchdown drive that took six minutes and four seconds.

Chandler Cox dove over the goal line to cap the drive with a 1-yard touchdown that was followed by a two-point conversion to put the Blue Darters ahead 22-9 with 5:54 left in the third quarter.

Still, Columbus kept itself in the game.

The Explorers answered with a 10-play, 72-yard drive that was capped by a great catch by Maloney to bring down an 11-yard touchdown pass from Beirne with 1:26 left in the third.

But Columbus' defense, which had allowed only 19 points in the playoffs, couldn't muster that one key stop to draw even with Apopka. A 22-yard touchdown pass from Cox to James Crider extended the lead to 30-16.

"A lot of people doubted us this season, and we always used that as fuel," senior linebacker J.R. Garrigo said. "This was still one of the best experiences of my life. We lost, but I made it here with all my brothers, so I'll never forget this."

Who are you wearing?

Former top model tells girls to seek true beauty, the kind "you can't buy in a bottle"

Blanca Morales - Florida Catholic

MIAMI | When she was a contestant in America's Next Top Model, Leah Darrow asserted before the reality TV show's judges that she was Catholic.

The judges looked at her quizzically and asked her, "Would you have a problem posing with the 'illusion' of nudity?"

Darrow replied, "No, I don't have a problem whatsoever."

That was before she "reverted" into the Catholic faith, fully embracing its teachings on human dignity and purity. Today Darrow is an international speaker on topics of modesty, chastity and relationships. She is coauthor of a soon-to-be-released book on modest fashion, Decent Exposure.

On Jan. 11, she spoke to an audience of 400 women at Archbishop Coleman Carroll High School in West Kendall, women who had gathered over tea and cakes to hear her speak on "Reclaiming Beauty."

The event was originally planned for the high school's female students and their mothers. Due to overwhelming interest, it was opened up to any woman, 13 or older, in the archdiocese, according to Sister Grace Helena, a Carmelite of the Most Sacred Heart who works at the school.

Shortly after her stint on America's Next Top Model, Darrow experienced a reconversion that led her to reexamine her values and standards. In her talk, she shared statistics on how modern society views beauty.According to surveys, 25 percent of young American women would prefer to win America's Next Top Model than the Nobel Peace Prize; 23 percent would rather lose the ability to read than lose their figure; and 96 percent of women worldwide don't believe they are beautiful.

"In Miami, you live in a challenging culture, one that gave the world its standards of beauty," Darrow said.

Based on the distorted sense of beauty she experienced first-hand at modeling agencies and reality TV, she encouraged her listeners to demand a higher level of dignity, and to cultivate the virtues of self-control and temperance.

She went on, "We are beautiful, powerful feminine creatures that were created to do

Darrow also pointed out that the most photographed woman in the world didn't wear makeup or dress in the latest fashions: Mother Teresa of Calcutta.

True beauty is rooted in service, Darrow said. "It empowers the gift of self. The beauty of the interior life lived outwardly… You can't buy that beauty in a bottle."

Fashionably-conscious in a classic "little black dress" and statement necklace, the former model asserted she still likes to be stylish, in a modest way.

Fashion, she said, identifies who a person is. Clothing communicates a person's standards and beliefs. She pointed to the clothes worn by the Carmelite sisters present: their veils and habits tell the world who they are and what they stand for.

She posed a question to the young women: "What does your clothing say about you? Who are you saying that you love with your fashion?"

Leah Darrow poses with Alexxis Ashby.

She noted that at special high-status events, actors and models are often asked, "Who are you wearing?" The celebrity's worth is then measured according to the designer who sponsored her eveningwear.

"Every time you get dressed, ask yourself, 'Who am I wearing?' Am I wearing the world or am I wearing the Creator of the universe?" Darrow concluded, asking those present to "reclaim beauty from a world that seeks to pervert it. You're worth it."

"Leah's talk has given me newfound hope," said

"We don't have to prove to the world with our bodies that we're women — it's already obvious," she said, adding, "We are not just a group of boobs and butts."

Kristina Maldonado, a Florida International University student. "I see so many girls today that settle for mediocrity, and it's heartbreaking. Somebody needs to stand up and challenge what society promulgates, and I'm glad Leah's message does just that."

THE BABY BULLS ACADEMY SATURDAY SCHOOL:

STUDENTS FROM MIAMI NORTHWESTERN SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL AND GULLIVER SCHOOLS VOLUNTEER IN COMMUNITY INITIATIVE

Miami-Dade Superintendent of Schools Alberto M. Carvalho and Gulliver Head of Schools Frank Steel to Visit Holmes Elementary School During Tutoring Program

Located at 1175 NW 67 Street in the Liberty City section of Miami, Holmes Elementary is home to approximately 550 predominantly African-American students. The school's purpose is to eliminate educational inequality in our urban community through character development, high academic expectations, rigorous instruction and real-world exposure – ultimately empowering its students to successfully compete in the global marketplace.

Since early 2014, the Baby Bulls program – held on a bi-monthly basis from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday mornings – offers both Miami Northwestern Senior High School AP students and Gulliver Prep IB students the opportunity to give their free time to make a life-changing impact on the lives of young students at Holmes.

"We are so grateful to have the Baby Bulls program at our school," said Holmes Elementary School Principal Dr. Yvonne Perry. "This unique relationship has allowed both the high school volunteers and the elementary school students to benefit and learn from each other in a fun, laid-back environment."

Cumulatively, 240 students have enrolled in the program to-date, and that number is expected to continue growing due to the unique "buddy system," which lets each Holmes Elementary student select a high school volunteer as his or her tutor. The "buddies" remain the same at every session, unless either the student or volunteer tutor is absent.

A Saturday morning at the Baby Bulls Academy consists of 40 minutes in each of three scheduled areas, including:

A) Literacy: one-on-one guided reading for comprehension
B) Reflection: writing and public speaking/ sharing time
C) Games: sports, arts and crafts and other activities

Following a healthy breakfast provided by M-DCPS, the "buddies" reunite and break off into their respective pairs. The students then select from a pile of donated books, which they use to bond over and can take home as a keepsake.

Throughout the course of the morning, the student works with the volunteer tutor to further improve his or her reading comprehension and vocabulary skills by reading and writing a summary of the donated book they selected. Each student is then encouraged to publicly share a few thoughts about their book, in an effort to help create camaraderie, build self-confidence and develop public speaking skills. Later in the morning, students and their tutors engage in games and activities that are intended to promote the importance of early childhood physical fitness.

On Saturday, November 8, beginning at 9 a.m., Carvalho and Steel will visit the Holmes Elementary Baby Bulls Academy Saturday School to experience the program first-hand. They will read with the students and offer members of the press more information about this community initiative. On this date, both Carvalho and Steel will be available for one-on-one interviews and photo ops. Holmes Elementary is located at 1175 NW 67 Street in Liberty City.

STUDENTS EXPLORE THEIR EDUCATIONAL OPTIONS AT SUCCESSFUL 2015 NATIONAL COLLEGE FAIR

From Léft to Right: School Board Vice Chair Dr. Lawrence Feldman; Superintendent Alberto M. Carvalho; School Board Chair Perla Tabares Hantman; and newly appointed Board member Lubby Navarro as they cut the ribbon opening the College Fair.

Miami-Dade County Public Schools

Miami-Dade County Public Schools (M-DCPS) held a successful National College fair at the Doubletree Miami Airport Hotel. Thousands of students and their parents attended the four-hour event to meet with representatives of more than 200 colleges and universities from around the world, to ask questions about admissions, financial aid and testing requirements.

"The College Fair provides families with valuable information that will help their children plan their college studies, decide their field of academic endeavor, and choose a career path," said School Board Chair Perla Tabares Hantman, who has been co-chair of the local National College Fair Committee for the past 19 years.

When Your Teen Hangs Out With the Wrong Crowd

1. TALK TO YOUR TEEN AND EXPRESS CONCERN.

- If the teen's friends are using drugs, smoking, or drinking alcohol, or other illegal activities, take a firm stand against it because their health and safety are at risk.
- Give them undivided attention and listen calmly. Concentrate on hearing rather than preaching. If your teenager cannot open up to at least one parent, encourage him or her to talk to a teacher, religious leader, school counselor, or another trusted adult.
- Don't criticize or attack your teen or their friends. Talk about the behavior, not the person.
- Find out why these friends are important to your teenager and talk about your teen's self-esteem and self-image.

2. SET RULES AND LIMITS WITH YOUR TEEN.

- Don't be afraid to set limits with your teen. Remember, you have a right and a legal responsibility (at least until their 18th birthday) to make the rules for your child.
- In the process of setting limits, allow the adolescent some input in establishing the rules. Draw up a written contact to eliminate any misunderstanding and have both the teenager and parents sign it.
- Monitor their behavior to see if they are compliant. (This may include computer monitoring.)

3. ENCOURAGE POSITIVE ACTIVITIES.

- Help your teens find positive activities to engage in. Look into youth groups or clubs, volunteering, sports, and hobbies to keep them away from unwanted friends.
- Encourage your teens to hang out with friends that you know and like. Suggest that they come to your house or plan group outings with them.

NOTICIAS DE RAQUEL REGALADO

Propuestas para internet de las escuelas del sistema escolar público de Miami-Dade

Raquel Regalado junto a la Banda de Jazz de la Escuela Intermedia Glades Middle School.

Continuando con su meta de preparar a todos los estudiantes para un mundo centrado en la tecnología, la dirigente del Distrito 6 de la Junta Escolar de Miami-Dade Raquel Regalado introdujo dos importantes propuestas a la junta escolar durante la reunión del miércoles, 19 de noviembre.

La primera propuesta pidió proveer a estudiantes, padres y maestros acceso a programas de computadoras para niños de educación primaria a través del sitio web del sistema de escuelas públicas de Miami-Dade y del sitio web de cada escuela primaria del sistema.

La segúnda propuesta pidió ampliar la conexión WiFi de las escuelas del sistema escolar público de Miami-Dade a lugares hasta una milla de distancia de cada escuela, ya que muchos estudiantes aun no tienen Internet en sus casas para hacer sus tareas y tampoco pueden contar con la ayuda de las bibliotecas públicas ya que tienen que esperar horas para su turno en utilizar una computadora y/o muchos de los equipos en las mismas ya no funcionan apropiadamente. Al extender la conexión WiFi de las escuelas, los estudiantes podrán acceder al Internet desde cualquier equipo informático y así tendrán mas facilidad para hacer las tareas que exigen ser hechas por Internet. Varios padres, maestros y alumnos asistieron a esta reunión para expresar su apoyo a estas iniciativas de la Dra. Raquel Regalado.

Durante la reunión, Regalado también tuvo el orgullo de presentar un reconocimiento a la banda de jazz de la escuela intermedia Glades Middle School por recibir el más alto reconocimiento nacional como conjunto de jazz que otorga la fundación nacional para la educación de música.

Capricornio: Te guste o no, te encuentras en una fase de grandes cambios.

Libra: Estará de nuevo en el punto de mira y por fin recogerá los frutos del trabajo que ha ido sembrando en los últimos dos años.

Acuario: Tu carácter pacífico sigue soportando mucha presión y parece que nunca descansará. ¿Cuándo llegará tu momento?.
